What is TPQ?

Transatlantic Policy Quarterly (TPQ) is an Istanbul-based journal aiming to foster original thinking and constructive policy debates on the Transatlantic and broader World Affairs. Formerly, the journal was known as Turkish Policy Quarterly (TPQ), which was focusing more on Turkey and its neighborhood. Since April 2022, the journal rebranded to cover a larger region and provide a more inclusive perspective to the readers. TPQ has been published for last twenty-years and continues its path following a refreshing rebranding process.

Subscriber Profile

TPQ is independent and non-profit, with a track record of including diverse and inter-disciplinary perspectives and encouraging critical opinions on every topic it covers.

TPQ serves as a platform for decision makers to voice their visions for the future. To date, heads of state including the Presidents of Georgia, Cyprus, Estonia, and Turkey as well as the King of Jordan and the Prince of Monaco have contributed to TPQ. We have also featured exclusive articles by ministers from Azerbaijan, Bulgaria, Canada, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Romania, Ukraine, Sweden, and Turkey.

Print Circulation 3000

Current and past issues of the journal, as well as further information can be found at www.transatlanticpolicy.com

Strong Outreach

Besides the 3000 hardcopies distributed, TPQ utilizes certain instruments to increase its outreach even more. With newsletters, media coverage and social media combined, TPQ reaches approximately 100,000 people – either directly or indirectly.

e-Newsletter

To increase the outreach of the journal TPQ publishes an e-newsletter and share it with our database of 15.000 people of relevant contacts that it has accumulated over the past 18 years including: decision makers, academics, civil society representatives, business people, and the media members.

A new democratic agenda to counter the populist tide
Berk Eren writes: The electoral dominance of populist parties is not irreversible. The AKP's defeat in the 2019 local elections in Turkey is a testament to the ability of opposition parties to defeat populists through the ballot box despite the uneven playing field. The opposition's campaign reveals a recipe for electoral success that can be emulated by opposition parties in other populist regimes.

Media Coverage

The TPQ team translates shortened versions of some of the articles and has them published in Turkish newspapers and online news portals. In addition, as a result of TPQ's agreement with Ebsco, Turkcell Dergilik and Ideal Online, TPQ is also published within these platforms. Journalists who receive the hardcopy TPQs are also expected to carry the issues taken up in the journal to their respective columns.

Social Media

TPQ has approximately 30.000 followers on its social media accounts. Upon the release of each issue TPQ uses social media extensively to draw visitors to its website. Combined with TPQ's content being accessible free online, these visitors continue to share the journal's content which further strengthens our outreach.

Opinion Section

TPQ has launched Opinion section online in its efforts to continue pushing the boundaries of discussion and encourage lively and informed exchanges on multiple platforms.

The Opinion section consists of reviews, short essays, general commentaries, and topical analyses of current developments on areas/topics that may include, but are not limited to: Transatlantic affairs, domestic political trends, regional security trends, developments in Turkey's neighborhood, Euro-Atlantic policies and relations with Turkey and the region, governance and democratization issues in the region, etc.

TPQ Events

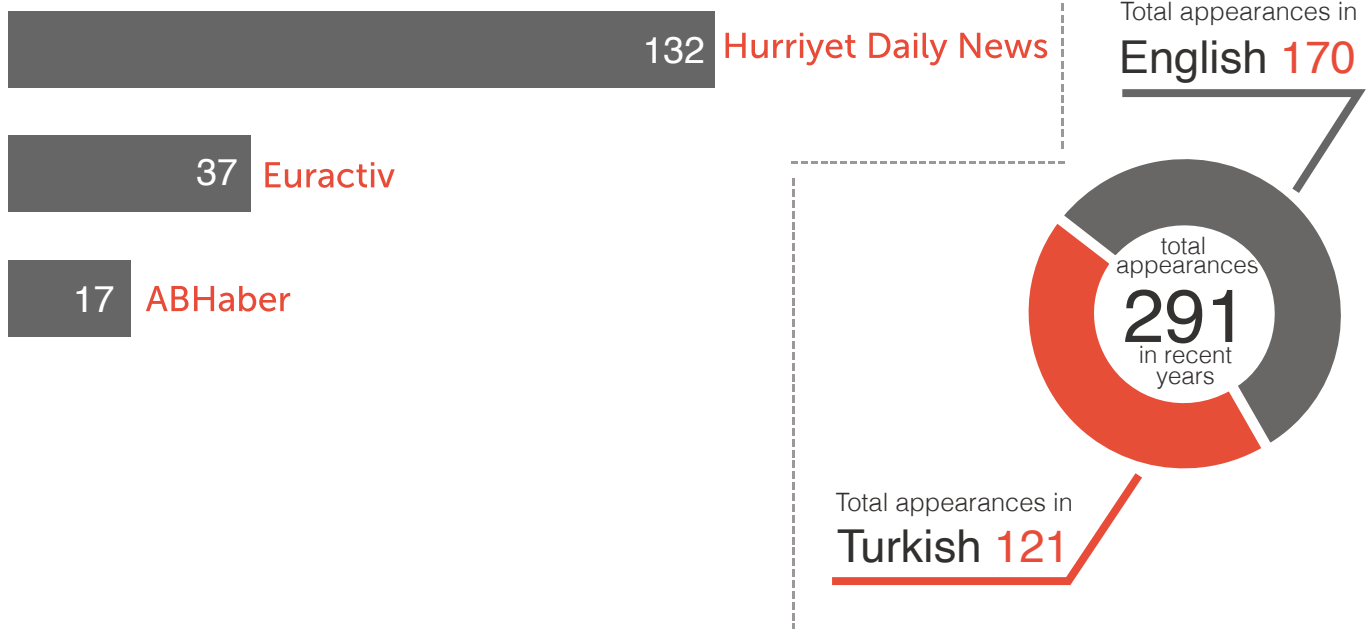

TPQ roundtables are organized several times a year to stimulate discussion on critical political, social, and economic developments in Turkey and its neighborhood. In recent years, Former US Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, Sweden's Former Minister for Foreign Affairs Carl Bildt, and Emeritus Professor Lord Anthony Giddens have participated in our roundtables as speakers.

- TPQ roundtable discussions serve as deliberative platforms by bringing academics, business people, the media, civil society representatives, and students together.
- Following the speakers' presentations, vibrant debates are always anticipated.
- To date, TPQ has organized 33 roundtable discussions in İstanbul, Ankara, Brussels, Van, Washington and Baku.
- TPQ Roundtables have been held with distinguished partners and corporate sponsors including BP Turkey, Friedrich Naumann Foundation, MATRA Fund of the Consulate General of the Kingdom of the Netherlands in Istanbul, the German Marshall Fund of the United States – Black Sea Trust, The Center for Strategic Studies under the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan (SAM), Istanbul Bilgi University, Kadir Has University, and NATO's Public Diplomacy Division to name some of them.
- TPQ roundtables generate high interest among the press, which greatly increases the outreach of the events.
- For a complete list of roundtables to date, please see APPENDIX III.

TPQ in the Media

TPQ has been featured more than 500 times in reputable news outlets such as: AGOS, Al Monitor, CNN, CNN Türk, Cumhuriyet, Duvar English, Euractiv, Financial Times, Huffington Post, Hurriyet Daily News, Hürriyet, Jerusalem Post, Milliyet, and The Globalist.

Turkey: An ambivalent actor in the Balkans?

The AKP has shifted Turkey's foreign policy by defining itself as the inheritor of the long-standing Ottoman cultural tradition, alongside its Sunni priorities and its attempts to influence the former Ottoman territories more assertively. Erdoğan has established networks with other Balkan leaders who are encountering criticism for their increasingly authoritarian rule; for some of these leaders, Erdoğan is a role model.

The Ukrainian crisis: the OSCE's special monitoring mission

In a co-authored article, Ambassador Ertuğrul Apakan, the Chief Monitor of the Organization for Security and Co-Operation in Europe's (OSCE) Special Monitoring Mission (SMM) to Ukraine, and Wolfgang Sporrer, a political analyst at the OSCE's SMM, discuss the progress of the Minsk process and the critical role of the organization's conflict prevention activities in Eastern Ukraine. Deployed in 2014 as an unarmed, civilian mission on the ground in Ukraine, the SMM's mandate is to "contribute to reducing tensions and to help foster peace, stability, and security," and to monitor and support the implementation of all OSCE principles and commitments. The authors point out that while the Minsk II ceasefire agreement – brokered by the leaders of France, Germany, Ukraine, and Russia in February 2015 – led to reduced levels of armed violence, most of the provisions of the settlement remain unfulfilled.

Turkey mulls 'bold steps' of Armenia to begin 'new era'

"In an article published in the spring edition of the Turkish Policy Quarterly journal, Davutoğlu wrote that Erdoğan's statement should be the foundation for further steps. "Erdoğan's message of condolence should not be seen as a conjunctural step. It should be seen as a prelude for transformation of minds and memories because this is not only an offer of condolence but also a sincere invitation to all parties to ensure a common future based on lasting peace," he wrote."

—Hurriyet Daily News, 25 June 2014

PM can't afford to lose; does that mean electoral fraud?

"Cem Toker, the chairman of the Liberal Party in Turkey, has penned an article listing his concerns of transparency and oversight with technical details, which was published in the winter issue of Turkish Policy Quarterly. As he has mobilized the liberals in the European Parliament, 18 MEP's led by liberal Dutch MEP Marietje Schaake have sent a letter to EU High Representative Catherine Ashton and European Enlargement Commissioner Stefan Füle to request that they set up an EU election observer mission for the monitoring of municipal elections."

—Hurriyet Daily News, 18 March 2014

Estonian President gives his backing to Turkey's EU bid

"In an exclusive interview with the Turkish Policy Quarterly journal, President Toomas Hendrik Ilves said a country's culture, history, or religion should not determine what kind of political civilization the country chooses to belong to, in reference to Turkey's EU membership bid."

—Hurriyet Daily News, 4 March 2014

Turkish businesses targeted after Erdogan comments

"In an article published on Friday in the journal Turkish Policy Quarterly but written in April, Rahmi Koc, the octogenarian honorary president of the group, made clear his reservations about Mr Erdogan's bid to make Turkey, the world's 17th-biggest economy, one of the 10 largest by 2023."
